CHARTER-TWC-BRIGHT HOUSE: THE FACTS ON COMPETITION

Charter is a different type of cable company-committed to offering the most innovative products, faster internet speeds at a great value, an open internet and superior customer service. By combining resources and having a national footprint, New Charter can serve as a counterbalance to industry giants, providing customers with better service at affordable rates. Even after completion of the transaction, New Charter would be the country's #3 video provider and the #2 broadband provider, well behind Comcast and AT&T.

New Charter will be significantly smaller than Comcast is today, but will compete with industry giants.

- US Telecom has asserted that “almost every home in the US has a choice of broadband providers” and “88 percent of U.S. households have a choice of two or more wired broadband providers.”
- New Charter would serve less than 21 percent of the wireline broadband market.
- With only 17 percent of the video market, New Charter will be the number three video provider after AT&T and Comcast.
- New Charter would serve only 23 percent of subscribers receiving 25 Mbps and above, a smaller percentage than Comcast serves today and less than half of what Comcast-TWC would have served.
- New Charter faces strong competition from AT&T, CenturyLink and Google, all of whom have significant resources and plans to grow significantly within New Charter’s footprint.

Unlike other mergers, New Charter is committed to protecting online video and net neutrality.

- Charter does not have significant programming interests to protect and thus has no incentive to harm online video distributors (OVDs) like Netflix
- Charter has fostered a good reputation with leading Internet video companies, with industry leaders such as Netflix and Cogent supporting the transaction.
- Charter’s commitment to no data caps or usage based billing means our customers are not punished for streaming online video.
- New Charter will not block or slow down Internet traffic or engage in paid prioritization-the same commitment already followed by Charter today.

New Charter’s commitment to diversity and independent programming has earned broad support.

- Charter carries more than 100 minority-focused networks, including BET, Bounce TV, TV One, El Rey and Fuse (formerly Nuvo), and 70 Spanish-language channels.

- Independent programmers that support New Charter include: TV One, Baby First, RFD-TV, One World Sports, Fuse Media, Ovation, Inspire, AXS TV, The Blaze, Condista, Bounce TV, Crown Media, and Reelz.
- Mark Cuban, Chairman and founder of AXS TV stated, "Charter has always been a customer-focused company, with a past of bringing the latest innovations and technology to its subscribers. Charter also has a history of working well and being proactive with minority and independent networks."

Most importantly, New Charter is a different kind of cable company, with industry-leading consumer-friendly business practices.

- Charter does not use data caps or bill customers based on data usage.
- Charter does not impose early termination fees.
- Charter does not impose modem fees.
- Charter has committed not to charge any interconnection fees for the next three years.
- Charter does not require our cable customers to rent a set-top box; customers can view our cable service on their mobile device or a Roku.
- Charter offers fast minimum broadband speeds of 60 Mbps with streamlined billing
- Charter developed a non-proprietary downloadable security system that enables us to work with any set-top box manufacturer.
